Russia Leaked Nixon Visit To French 6 Days in Advance

By Don Cook

PARIS, Oct. 14.—The White House may not be aware of it, but the Russians leaked word of President Nixon's planned visit to Moscow six days before the formal announcement was made.

When the new Russian Ambassador to France, Pyotr Abramov, presented his credentials to President Georges Pompidou, at the Elyse Palace Oct. 6, he was instructed by the Kremlin to mention to the French president privately that the American President had been invited to Moscow and had accepted.

This was then followed up by a Moscow leak to Soviet journalist Victor Louis, who filed a dispatch to the London Evening News Oct. 11, forecasting a summit conference between the Soviet Union and the United States, and adding that peace was now in the air in the Vietnam war.

The advance leak by the Russians to the French is, of course, of much more importance and surprise than the KGB press hall-leak to Victor Louis.

U.K. Soldiers In Clash on Ulster Road

BELFAST, Oct. 14 (Reuters).—Gunmen today pinned down 25 British soldiers in a 90-minute hail of gunfire in a big battle along the Northern Ireland border.

The battle erupted when 35 Royal Army Engineers arrived at the quiet border village of Forkhill to blow up an auxiliary road leading into the Irish Republic.

Estimates put the number of guerrillas firing from a densely wooded section of the republic's border at up to 40. They poured about 300 rounds of automatic, rifle and pistol fire at the soldiers, wounding one in the leg.

The soldiers returned the fire with about 150 rounds and called in armored car reinforcements. They said they believed they wounded at least three of the gunmen.

The soldiers were reported bitter that neither the republic's army nor police had intervened during the fighting. But five persons were reported to have been arrested by the republic's police after the battle died down.

Reports from the republic said that the Irish Army had sealed off their side of the border area within minutes of the battle.

A television crew of the British Broadcasting Corp., filming the clash, twice came under fire. The injured soldier was the second to have been shot since the army yesterday started its program of blowing craters in about 40 of 200 cross-border roads.

The army blasted 10 roads yesterday, but one was filled by morning by local residents and civil rights groups.

Tape-Cutting Ceremony Civil rights supporters said they carried out the job under the leadership of Paddy O'Malley, a Catholic member of the Northern Ireland Parliament.

The road, in a mountainous area 40 miles southeast of Belfast near where today's battle took place, was reopened in an impromptu tape-cutting ceremony and renamed "Taylor's Folly" in honor of a provincial government minister who has long advocated making craters in the border roads.

In Londonderry, soldiers moved in to search houses on the troubled Catholic Creggan Estate, and the army said a firefight started after "quite a number" of men were seen with rifles, sub-machine guns and shotguns. Three men were seen to fall, the army said. No military casualties were reported.

In Belfast, police arrested six men some of whom armed and four buses were hijacked and burned following an intense army house-to-house search in which hundreds of detonators and lengths of fuse were found.

South of the border, in Cork, a British cargo vessel was damaged by an explosion shortly after docking today. No one was hurt, and police said it appeared as though a small charge of dynamite had been thrown on board from the dock.

In Letter to Westmoreland Henderson Offered in 1969 To Take Blame for My Lai

By Peter Braestrup

FT. MEADE, Md., Oct. 14 (WP).—Soon after the My Lai massacre broke into public print in late 1969, Col. Oran K. Henderson wrote a letter to Army Chief of Staff William C. Westmoreland offering to take full responsibility for the whole kit and kaboodle. I would have done anything the Army asked me to do. If the Army had given me false statements to sign, I'd gladly have signed them.

The letter, which had been cited in pretrial hearings, was read aloud to the seven-man military jury yesterday by a prosecution witness, Bland West, the Army's deputy general counsel. It was written Dec. 10, 1969, eight days after Col. Henderson's first appearance before an Army panel investigating the killing in March 1968 at My Lai.

In concluding his letter to Gen. Westmoreland, Col. Henderson wrote: "In the interest of strengthening the American people's confidence in its Army and to halt a growing disenchantment within the Army junior officer corps, a speedy decision is urgently needed. Consequently, I urge that the Army announce its findings even though the current [Peers panel] investigation proceeds, and that responsibility with qualification be assigned solely to me."

Gen. Westmoreland's reply was not disclosed in court. Col. Henderson's lawyers said later that the colonel got a brief letter saying, in effect, "Thanks, but no thanks." Col. Henderson, in an interview published June 2 in the Army Times, had referred obliquely to the letter:

"I offered myself as a scapegoat for the Army. I would have accepted responsibility for the whole kit and kaboodle. I would have done anything the Army asked me to do. If the Army had given me false statements to sign, I'd gladly have signed them."

Col. Henderson, who was among 13 officers accused last year of covering up the massacre, is the only one to stand trial. His immediate superior in Vietnam, Maj. Gen. Samuel Koster, the former American Division commander, was reduced one rank to brigadier general last summer.

Gen. Koster's deputy, Brig. Gen. George Young, was encouraged to retire early.

Consented Commanders Col. Henderson, in his letter, told Gen. Westmoreland what his lawyers have said during this eight-week-old trial: He consulted subordinate commanders and uncovered no evidence of a massacre.

However, Col. Henderson specifically mentioned neither an investigation ordered two days after My Lai by Brig. Gen. Young nor a subsequent investigation in April 1969 ordered by Gen. Koster.

Col. Henderson's letter began: "Following the My Lai operations, 16 March, 1968, I conducted a command inquiry based upon an eyewitness report [cited by witnesses in this trial as coming from helicopter pilots and relayed by their unit commanders to Col. Henderson] that noncombatants had been killed by wild shooting of ground troops and gunships, and by command channel reports that 20 noncombatants had been killed by artillery and gunshot fire."

"Inquiry Initiated by Me" "This inquiry was initiated by me without guidance or knowledge of any headquarters. Consequently the depth of the inquiry was based solely on my judgment. I did not treat it lightly; however, I was unable to produce a single additional witness or a thread of evidence to substantiate the eyewitness report."

The prosecution has introduced testimony seeking to show that additional witnesses, including Col. Henderson's own ground troops, were available but that neither Col. Henderson nor anyone else in his brigade sought seriously to interrogate them.

Kings, Presidents, Sheikhs in Iran

The Shah All Smiles at His Banquet

PERSEPOLIS, Iran, Oct. 14 (UPI).—The Shah of Iran was the host at a banquet tonight in a vast, luxurious tent whose chandeliers arched in high winds above the heads of more kings, queens and presidents than probably ever before dined at a single table.

Among the Shah's guests helping to mark the 2,500th anniversary of the Persian Empire were an emperor, eight kings, three ruling princes, 12 presidents, ten sheiks, two sultans, three prime ministers, a cardinal and two vice-presidents.

All sat at a single table that covered across most of the 242-foot-long tent. French craftsmen revived the style from the days of King Louis XIV so that each of the representatives of 69 nations could see the others without craning.

When he took his seat, the Shah took out a pair of shell-rimmed glasses, put them on and carefully looked at the guests. Then he took off his glasses with a smile of what seemed to be satisfaction.

"Turn the Page" In a welcoming address, the Shah said: "I take the present assembly of the great personages of the world at Persepolis, the historic birthplace of the Persian Empire, as a good omen because I feel that in our gathering this evening past history is linked with the realities of today."

He said it was time to turn the page of history on darkness, war, ignorance, disease, hunger, discrimination and injustice.

In replying on behalf of the guests, Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie said: "By proving what can be done with one's history, the events of the last few days are also teaching the world a valuable lesson."

The Shah, in military uniform, led in Queen Ingrid of Denmark, who was wearing the Danish royal tiara and other jewels, and the Shah's wife, Empress Farah, in a mustard gold gown and the Iranian crown jewels, entered with Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

A Change From Mozart Then, two by two, in came the men in military decorations, the women in jewels: President Tito of Yugoslavia, President Nikolai V. Podgorny of Russia, King Olaf of Norway, King Frederick IX of Denmark, King Baudouin of the Belgians and Queen Fabiola, King Hussein and Princess Muna of Jordan, Prince Philip and Princess Anne of Britain, Prince Juan Carlos and Princess Sophie of Spain.

As the Shah entered, an orchestra that had been playing Mozart switched to the Iranian national anthem. The high winds across the south Iranian desert pulled at the roof of the tent and the big chandeliers, draped in artificial leaves and flowers, jerked up and down.

Although the chandeliers were strengthened with steel wiring, more than one world figure gave them a speculative glance.

The tent was carpeted in blue, and had blue velvet walls and a pleated pink silk ceiling. In front of the top table were 36 smaller tables with 13 chairs each—13 is not an unlucky number in Iran—for the diplomatic corps, business and social guests.

Princess Anne of Britain was seated at one of these tables with the Shah's brother, Prince Gholam, Anne entered from the imperial red reception room where the Shah and Empress Farah greeted their guests and took her seat while most others were still standing. She wore a green brocade gown with ruff sleeves and had her blonde hair swept up under a tiara.

Surprisingly, at least two of the guests arrived in lounge suits. There were a number of empty chairs when the waiters—brought from France and Switzerland for the meal—came in further strengthening their right of Egypt."

Dr. Sutherland is married, with two sons and two daughters.

"More Like a Hobby" NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 14 (AP).—Dr. Sutherland sat in the den of his Nashville home and noted that his Nobel prize-winning research of 25 years had become almost a hobby.

"In fact, in the beginning," he laughed, "it really was more like a hobby."

Dr. Sutherland said he liked to call cyclic AMP a second messenger. He said the discovery of the function of the substance already has had repercussions throughout the world.

"It's just getting into everything. I can't keep up with it. There must be maybe 2,000 doctors and two-thirds of the drug companies working on it."

Dr. Sutherland, just back from a fishing trip, said the Nobel award did not come as a great surprise.

"I had heard I was being mentioned for the past five years," he said. "I figured it would be this year or next."

Less Than the Best

The President is going to Moscow—which is good. But Secretary Laird glooms over the rapid rise in Soviet missile strength on land and sea—and that is bad. Mr. Nixon is also going to Peking (good), but the United States is involved in a complex struggle to keep Taiwan in the UN, the effects of which can be unfortunate. Just so, organized labor has agreed to serve on the new Pay Board, which is good for the prospects for Phase 2 of the Nixon economic policy—but on terms which suggest such complete autonomy for the board and such complete freedom for the unions to defy the board that the prospects become dim again.

So, at home and abroad, the American people are forced to settle for less than the best—this, of course, is repugnant to those who have a very clear idea of just what is best and who are sure it could be attained if those in power only had the wisdom their critics so indubitably possess. But for realists, worse than the best may be far better than the worst, and in all of the instances mentioned above there remains the possibility of improving difficult situations by reasonable discussion.

It is only a possibility. In the case of the Soviet Union, the Nixon visit, plus the strategic arms limitation talks, may conceivably reduce the levels of national expenditure on arms and the race for superiority in them. With regard to Peking, there will be repercussions of the UN struggle over the status of Taiwan, but again, conceivably, the Nixon journey may open the way to constructive discussions of the differences between the United States and the People's Republic of China. Finally, although the acknowledgment of organized labor as, in effect, a sovereign state within the American economic community is ominous, there is still the hope that a measure of statesmanship will prevail within the Pay Board.

Well over a century ago, Alexis de Tocqueville wrote a most perceptive, and still valuable, study of American institutions and mores as they existed at the time of his visit to the young republic. One of his chapters is headed: "How the Americans Combat Individualism by the Doctrine of Self-Interest Properly Understood." Self-interest remains a vital force in today's America: it will probably influence, in one form or another, the negotiations in Moscow and Peking, as well as the deliberations of the Pay Board. The public, business and labor representatives on the board will each have his own notion of what individual self-interest, as projected into the group he speaks and acts for, means. But just as these persons will stand for collective entities, so they will have a responsibility to see that this interest is "properly understood."

For the individual member of a particular union, that interest may seem to be a specific wage raise, in a specific contract, but its effect—immediately upon the larger community, ultimately upon the union and the individual—may be quite the reverse of what an unenlightened self-interest might appear to dictate. If enlightenment can come through discussion, the results will not be wholly bad. De Tocqueville commented: "Every American has the sense to sacrifice some of his private interests to save the rest. We want to keep, and often lose, the lot." The dichotomy between Americans and Europeans may not be as sharp as in his day; he may even have been overstating the case then. But the ideal is worth holding before the Pay Board—and the American people.

More Than Merely 'Present'

"I would place you among the greatest secretaries of state this country has had," Harry S. Truman wrote to Dean Acheson as they prepared to leave office in 1953. We are still too close to the events of that period to evaluate Mr. Truman's characteristically exuberant assessment. What is clear is that Mr. Acheson, not only as secretary of state but during six wartime and postwar years as assistant and under secretary, played a highly creative and often decisive role in the shaping and administration of American foreign policy.

These were crisis years in which the United States groped its way out of prewar isolationism into a commanding role in a dangerous world, often by ad hoc planning and improvisation. The philosophy and ideology with which Mr. Acheson helped clothe the American policy may well have led to the global overcommitment of which the nation is now so weary. Yet much of what he helped build has stood the test of the intervening years; some of it is certain to endure for the indefinite future.

As assistant secretary of state he played a major part in creating the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, whose long period of usefulness has by no means been ended with the current financial divisions in the Western world. As under secretary he delivered at Cleveland, Miss., what Mr. Truman rightly called "the prologue to the Marshall Plan" a month before Secretary of State Marshall sketched its foundation at Harvard.

The Acheson imprint was on the Truman Doctrine and the North Atlantic Treaty, along with the decision to rearm West Germany as a partner in that alliance. He recommended American intervention in Korea, masterminded the peace treaty that restored Japan to international respectability and ordered the White Paper on China, which documented the disintegration of the Nationalist government and provoked enduring attacks on Mr. Acheson, many of them by critics who had never bothered to read it.

It was a remarkably constructive and effective public career; but one can only guess how effective Mr. Acheson might have been as secretary of state had he not lost to some degree the confidence of Congress and the public because of the contemptible and vicious attacks of Sen. Joseph McCarthy and others who, for partisan ends, joined in the preposterous charge that he was "soft" on Communism and somehow had "lost" China to the Reds. Such defamation inevitably narrowed his scope for diplomatic experiment and maneuver. It may be recalled today that President Nixon, who now rightly praises Mr. Acheson's "rigorous conscience" and "profound devotion to his country," gleefully assaulted "Dean Acheson's college of cowardly Communist containment" in the 1952 campaign. It is a measure of Mr. Acheson's stature that he freely gave his counsel, when invited to do so, to the man who made that savage attack.

After leaving office, Mr. Acheson gave even looser rein to the sharp, tart tongue that had earned him some unnecessary enemies on Capitol Hill. With more than a touch of arrogance, he had always made it clear that he did not suffer fools gladly—or those whom he considered fools, and the latter often included citizens of more than average intelligence who happened to disagree with him. His views on foreign policy seemed to have been frozen at the height of the Cold War. His contempt for the United Nations and for those opposed to white minority rule in southern Africa did him no credit in his later years.

Still, Mr. Acheson obviously relished the role of elder statesman and commentator. He wrote many articles and letters for magazines and newspapers, and he produced six books which shed light on his time. He called the last book, dealing with the major foreign policy developments of his public years, "Present at the Creation." It was outrageously—uncharacteristically—modest. Dean Acheson was decidedly more than "present."

International Opinion

Sadat's Shopping List

Short of some undercover contacts going on between Egypt and Israel through Dr. Jarring, or at the United Nations, or in Washington—which seems highly unlikely—the Rogers plan must be regarded as a dead duck. It is this which makes Mr. Sadat's talks in Moscow so important. Russo-Egyptian relations have been going through a sticky period.

Mr. Sadat wants to find out from the Russians how far they would support him if he took aggressive action against Israel in Sinai. It would entail supplies of such weapons as land-to-land rockets as well as extra aircraft and tanks. The Soviet leaders seem disinclined to meet requests of this kind, yet must pay very careful attention to them. Egypt appears to be playing it both ways. There has been just enough warmth in her recent relations with Washington to make the Russians jittery.

CADIZ, Spain.—"If Spain has not put down the insurrection in Cuba by April 1, it is the intention of the Government to give up the struggle and let the island go." The significance of this statement, coming from an officer of rank in the Spanish Army, must certainly be regarded as of no little importance. If Spain thinks Mr. McKinley's election to be sure, they expect no favors from him.

The motor men feel that it is one of the most encouraging moves made by the Government to help the French automobile industry.

Jet Voyages of Discovery

By C. L. Sulzberger

MONTRE CARLO.—Every now and then the world's statesmen, benefiting from the jet age, seek to embellish diplomacy with motion. We have entered another season of official tourism. Even this miniature's sovereign prince is on tour. One is reminded of the legend that President Eisenhower ordered his roving secretary of state: "Foster, don't do something, stand there."

The most significant of the most recent actual or projected journeys are those of President Nixon to Peking and Moscow. Nixon's proposed trip has already changed world relationships. It is hard to imagine that the results of the President's Peking colloquy could transcend in importance the mere accomplishment of arranging it.

Bufile

Apart from this feature of the diplomatic circuit, there is an extraordinary amount of travel either scheduled or already accomplished by international leaders. Willy Brandt has called on Brezhnev and has received Emperor Hirohito who had already chatted with Nixon and Pompidou, the Queen of England and Heath en route.

Brezhnev himself went to see Tito and will visit Paris this month while his colleagues, Podgorny and Kosygin, respectively, go to Hanoi and to Algeria, Canada, Norway and Denmark. For his part, Tito is travelling to Washington as Nixon's guest—as will India's mistress Gandhi.

Egyptian President Sadat flew to Moscow; the prime minister of Malaysia will go to Bulgaria; the British foreign minister intends to visit Rhodesia and South Africa's principal black leaders (from the Zulu, Transkei and Tsavans) are awaited in London.

There is an obvious and realistic pattern to most of these journeys. Nixon's terminates 22 years of detente and U.S. China policy. The Soviet leaders' trips are clearly designed to build new bridges and strengthen Moscow's ties with countries that might be influenced by possible Sino-American friendship.

The flurry of voyages to and from Middle Eastern lands relates to gathering tensions as the UN again debates the Palestine war and as the threat of renewed conflict revives. The most useful trip is that of Vice-President Agnew to Turkey and Greece. The vice president is representing Nixon in Iran as the shah celebrates the 2,500th anniversary of the founding by Cyrus the Great of a Persian empire and, in doing so, entertains a cluster of international stars. Since Nixon himself was not free to take part in this event it is fitting that the No. 2 man should delegate for him.

But it is not fitting that the occasion should serve as an excuse for Agnew to also visit Turkey and Greece. This should not be a Cook's tour and geographical propinquity—the relative nearness to Iran of Turkey and Greece—is no satisfactory substitute for inept political thinking.

The Turks are in the throes of an unpredictable political crisis which is unlikely to be resolved by the vice president's soothing talents. And the fact that he will spend the weekend in Greece en route back to Washington is calculated to inspire nothing but trouble.

Agnew's presence in Ankara and Athens will be deliberately interpreted in those capitals as at least an inferential blessing by Washington on respectively tacit and open dictatorships. At a moment when U.S. public opinion, especially as expressed through congressional bodies, has induced the State Department to order its ambassador in Athens to establish personal contact with the principal leaders of the Greek opposition—touching off rebukes from the dictatorial regime—it is silly to counteract such a trend by an official visit.

The vice president's stopover is bound to be widely advertised by the Athenian columnists who do not, incidentally, forget Agnew's Greek ancestry and will surely not be loath to stress it. Personal diplomacy is a valid, useful art when properly applied and timed but it can be counterproductive if these basic rules are ignored.

While nothing but praise should be directed at the Nixon trip to Peking and Moscow, one might say of the Agnew visit to Athens what the Grand Duke of Tuscany once told a Venetian ambassador. The envoy admitted that a certain diplomatic mission was foolish but added: "I am not surprised; we have many fools in Venice." The grand duke replied: "We also have folly in Florence but we take care not to export it."

Where the Heart Calls

By Yehudi Menuhin

MOSCOW.—It is with deep feeling that I address you tonight for I stand here not only as a musician but as a Russian Jew, as one whose parents were born in this land, for which they both retain a deep attachment.

I am, therefore, if you will accept me, not addressing you as an outsider, but as someone whose feelings for and interests in Russia are deep and constant and who would wish, if you would grant me your understanding, to express a little of what he feels most constitute the role of this vast, great and varied land in today's disrupted world.

That I should speak of such things as a musician is perfectly in order, for did not music in the conduct of government as other more mundane and less elusive factors?

Herein lies the consummate danger, for it is the discipline and logic of music and its consequent harmony that should be put to the service of mankind, not its surface value as propaganda; it must be envisaged in its deepest and most serious significance as the expression of what cannot be put into words. Therefore, as musicians it behooves us all to watch very carefully, else it will be said of us what is said of the military, e.g., that war is too important to be left to the generals.

If we are obliged today to confront the gravest problems of humanity—those of total survival or annihilation of life, those of total madness or equilibrium, those of total fear or trust, wisdom, humility, open-mindedness, bridging every difference in tradition, background, speech or attitude—so must we, by the same token, at the same instant and in like measure, live as single individuals, single plants, who live equally to themselves, to the ground under their feet, to their loved ones, to their modes of expression, to their tastes and esthetic patterns, to their own thoughts:

Not alone to their country, not simply to their people, but at the same time to themselves, and each one freely to himself. Oh, I know how very deeply every citizen in this huge country is attached to his own particular and native region: not all of us living today are as happy as he must be.

I would like to thank you for printing the two letters of Mr. Hugh-Jones (Sept. 30 and Oct. 1) concerning the effect of current French policies on the bank accounts of those of us resident in France and I would urge you to devote some news space to this problem. There is need for more discussion and explanation of these policies as well as for more concerted action to bring home to the French authorities the justice of our position.

The Guillotine

Thanks for Don Cook's good guillotine story (IET, Oct. 13) I read an Associated Press feature two years ago that said Dr. Guillotin did not invent it. He merely pushed its adoption through parliament in order to provide uniformly democratic executions for the poor, who were then being hanged, and the rich, who enjoyed a swordman on a velvet-covered chopping block.

A similar machine shows up on a 1521 engraving now in a German museum. The first French one was built by Tobias Schmidt, a piano maker, in 1792. But while France executed only 1,910 persons between 1825 and 1895, Hitler had 20 guillotines built in Germany which severed 15,500 heads between 1933 and 1945.

The last "Monsieur de Paris" who would be about 72 if still alive, was Andre Obrecht, a retired master mechanic in an auto plant. He got the job in 1951 on the death of "Red Man" Henri Desfourneaux, his uncle—there were 150 other applications for the job. Obrecht was quoted as saying "The machine is the best guardian of society. Those who are urging an end to it might someday be the first to demand its return, if a series of attacks and particularly nasty crimes followed."

The present guillotine, which Obrecht built himself in 1953, is stored in a big box at La Santé prison in Paris and sped to various sites in a Citroen station wagon. Much of the AP information came from the book "Tu Ne Tueras Pas" (Thou Shalt Not Kill) by Paris attorney Albert Naud.

Paris. Dr. Guillotin introduced his bill in the French National Assembly in December, 1789. According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, he based his proposal on a make-shift execution machine of a blade between two uprights which had been used in Milan in 1763. After his bill became law, the first guillotine was built in a Paris hospital. No mention is made of the builder, but possibly it was piano maker Tobias Schmidt.

In any case, after "satisfactory experiments" on several dead bodies, the machine was judged to be in working order, and was first put to official use in April, 1792. A highwayman named Felleter was the first man to be guillotined in France. Your correspondent is correct about Andre Obrecht having succeeded Henri Desfourneaux, and then retiring as France's last official executioner. Your clips let me down on this point.

Paris. DON COOK

Metro vs. Subway

Concerning Mr. Levitt's letter "Metro vs. Subway" (IET, Oct. 11) and his hyperbolic comparison of S.N.C.F. carriages to oxcarts, let me quote from "The New Yorker" of Oct. 9. First, from "The Talk of the Town," page 38.

"Dialogue between a woman passenger and a conductor on a train headed for New York from Tomkors:

W: When will this train get to New York?

C: It should be there an hour ago.

W: I hope we make it." And from the same issue, page 122, in an article by Calvin Trillin called "U.S. Journal: Manhattan," this on other reasons, (and why, among other reasons, Mr. Trillin prefers his bicycle):

"... The New York subway system, for instance, is the only subway system I have ever encountered that places almost all of its maps inside the trains—so that a passenger who has spent five minutes wringing from the map the information on how to get to the Brooklyn Bridge has also spent that five minutes on his way to Queens Plaza. It is apparently subway policy that announcing to passengers why the downtown express has not been by for fifteen minutes or why they have been in a dark tunnel for half an hour would constitute a breach of security."

Mr. Levitt neglects to mention the current difficulties of AM-TRAK in bringing order to U.S. passenger train service; the fact that Rohr Corporation (builders of San Francisco's much publicized "BART" system) is studying France's air cushion train; or the present interest of social anthropologists in (primitive) subway mob behavior.

As for oxcarts, give me one every time that departs and arrives on schedule, and let Mr. Levitt take the PATH back to New Jersey. PAUL S. DEEMS, Versailles.

Bishops' Synod Told Church Must Start Promoting Justice

By Edward B. Fiske

ROME, Oct. 14 (NYT).—Delegates to the third Synod of Bishops turned their attention today to what they can do to promote world justice and were told that the best place to start is in the Roman Catholic Church itself.

Before preaching against injustice in the world, said Archbishop Leopoldo Alberto of the Philippines, the church must be sure to appear just in the eyes of others.

He questioned whether the church in various countries is careful to pay "fair compensation" to its own employees, whether it encourages freedom of speech within its ranks and whether it always administers church property as "the patrimony of the poor."

Archbishop Alberto spoke as the synod, attended by more than 300 bishops and others from around the world, began to shift its focus from the crisis in the priesthood to the theme of world justice.

The synod fathers are still scheduled to have small-group discussions on practical issues of the priesthood, and council leaders have not let it be known when voting on these matters will take place.

An analysis of the formal presentations on the priesthood crisis indicates that a majority of speakers favored some change in church policy to permit the ordination of married men in situations of shortages of priests. A vigorous minority has opposed such a move, however, and no one is sure how far the synod will go in the direction of authorizing experimentation with a married clergy.

Many speakers, especially those from Northern Europe, Canada and Latin America, have urged a policy of ordaining married men where a serious need exists but in the context of reaffirmation of the general principle of celibacy for priests.

However, Antonio Cardinal Sore, the prefect of the Congregation for the Sacraments, who some say is close to papal thinking on the subject, told the bishops that they should not go any further than suggesting special appeals to the Pope in individual cases.

In his introduction to the justice theme, Archbishop Alberto, who was supposed to reflect preliminary documents submitted to the synod by national conferences, urged the bishops to produce "not general principles but specific action."

The archbishop stated that the church itself has indulged in "an accumulation of wealth that causes identification of the church with the rich and powerful while reducing her credibility when she does seek to speak out against injustice and to promote justice."

He also said that church leaders have sometimes forced their employees to "accept less than just pay under the pretext that they work for a charitable institution while we ourselves have not imposed [the same] frugality and austerity on ourselves."

Hirohito Home, Says Amity Will Require 'Further Efforts'

By Richard Halloran

TOKYO, Oct. 14 (NYT).—Emperor Hirohito of Japan returned home from his European tour today and told his people: "I feel deeply that further efforts will be needed to achieve international friendship and world peace."

He thus seemed to have sensed the mood of many Japanese, who were bewildered but not angered by the often cool and occasionally hostile reception given the emperor in Western Europe during the last 18 days.

A senior Japanese official said the attitude of Europeans had been "a signal to the Japanese people that the war has not been forgotten. It is a time for reflection for us, to see what we should do to overcome those feelings."

The emperor flew here from Alaska, where he was met by Gov. William A. Egan during a refueling stop for the Japanese jetliner. The informal greeting contrasted to the ceremonies here when President Nixon welcomed the emperor Sept. 26, the first time a Japanese monarch had set foot on foreign soil.

Sale at Airport
In Tokyo, the emperor and Empress Nagako were met by Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko, Premier Eisaku Sato and other Japanese dignitaries and the diplomatic corps.

After several hours, the emperor stepped before television cameras, unrolled a scroll, and said that although he had appreciated the generally warm welcome in seven European countries, Japan must exert greater efforts to improve its image abroad.

Then he was driven to the palace.

The Japanese reaction to the trip was perhaps best summed up by a news executive of the Japan Broadcasting Corp., better known as NHK, which had sampled its viewers. "Most of them," the executive said, "were sobered by the realities of our international relations."

"They seemed surprised," he said, "that the name of Hirohito was connected with those unpleasant aspects of the war."

The television networks and the daily papers generally emphasized the positive aspects of the trip but did not dilute the protests during it.

Younger Generation Affected
The NHK executive said that the younger generation had been particularly surprised by the adverse reception.

An Englishman here reported, for example, that he had been asked by a young Japanese friend born after World War II, "Did we really do all those bad things during the war? Please tell me about them, I want to know."

Among older people, the reaction was somewhat different. The NHK executive said that his office had received a number of calls complaining that the live television broadcasts were putting too much attention on the incidents and not enough on what the emperor and empress were doing.

BIELEFELD, Germany, Oct. 14 (AP).—Fritz and Emma Meinert, who were born as twins 84 years ago, have died on the same day.

Fritz Meinert, a retired house painter, was critically injured in an automobile accident on Oct. 2.

His unmarried sister, who had not heard of the accident, took to bed that same day complaining she was not feeling well. Five hours after her brother died, Emma Meinert passed away.

British Drop Drunk Charge Against Defector

LONDON, Oct. 14 (AP).—Police today dropped drunken driving charges against Oleg Lyalin, the Soviet trade official whose defection last month led to the expulsion of 103 Soviet diplomats.

A representative of the director of public prosecutions said it was not in the public interest to proceed with the case.

The charges against Mr. Lyalin, 34, were "driving while unfit through drink" and "failing to give breath and laboratory specimens." He was arrested early on Aug. 30 when police stopped his car in central London.

Mr. Lyalin was released on bail of £50 put up by the Soviet Embassy, but he failed to show up for his hearing. At this time the Soviet official defected, giving information which set off the spy scandal.

3 Asian Children Die in U.K. Fire Arson Suspect

BRADFORD, England, (Reuters).—Police today are hunting in this industrial town today for a Kenyan Asian children who died in a fire at their home. Five of every male are to be covering families in a streets.

Forensic experts said could have been poured front door and through box and then ignited the fatal fire. The child from smoke asphyxiated bedroom as the hallway.

The fire was the 13th immigrant homes in since June. About 50,000 live in a Bradford, while Manchester.

Chief Superintendent Hinchliffe the city's top told newsmen: "I have son to believe that this maliciously set on fire, will be the continual series of arson which occurred in this city at this year."

But he said there evidence to suggest the was the work of an group attacking immigrants.

PARIS MOVIES

Superb Simenon

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

PARIS, Oct. 14 (IET).—Some novels make satisfactory films: some do not. The cinema has often done Somerset Maugham, Rex Beach, Blasco Ibañez and even Henry James credibly. What it has done on occasion to Dostoevski and Conrad is incredible. The limitations of their medium appears to be unknown to the purchasers of movie rights. Thus, James Joyce's "Ulysses" has been filmed and now Proust is promised.

The prolific Georges Simenon is an author who transfers to the screen with ease. This is scarcely surprising because his novels show not only a dramatist but a photographer. They are packed with vivid incidents, violent conflicts, intriguing figures and persuasive atmospheric detail. With the haste necessary to the motion picture he draws his characters and sets his scenes and then plunges one into a narrative of binding intensity.

Best Seller

Earlier this season a film version of his grim novelette of the Parisian tenements, "Le Chat," was seen, with Simone Signoret and Jean Gabin leading it. Its tritonic impact as its irreconcilable old couple. Now a celluloid edition of another Simenon best seller, "La Veuve Couderc," has arrived (at the Colisée). An admirable adaptation in every aspect, it is destined for popular and critical success.

A tale of wider appeal than "Le Chat," it tells of a middle-aged peasant woman who is at odds with her late husband's relatives over the property she has inherited along the canal banks near Dijon. She engages a young vagrant, an escaped prisoner, as a farmhand, and, in her loneliness, falls in love with him. But he prefers her young niece, and his wooing of her becomes another bone of contention in the family feud. The drama moves relentlessly to a climax of general slaughter, made more poignant and compelling by the lyricism with which its director, Pierre Granier-Deferre, has caught the beautiful background.

Simone Signoret is magnificent as the fierce, embittered widow, and Alain Delon, an actor of unfailing charm, scores with a moving portrayal of the hapless felon. There is effective acting in support as well, with Otavia Piccolo as the farm girl of easy virtue and arrested mind and Jean Tessier as the senile grandfather, yet another cause for dispute among the relations.

"Boulevard du Rhum" (at the France-Blysses and the Mercury) begins brightly with some scenes of an illicit liquor fleet trying to break through the U.S. gunboat patrol off the Florida coast during Prohibition. There has not been an amusing comedy about rum-running since "12 Miles Out" and

Alain Delon and Simone Signoret in "La Veuve Couderc."

"Bottled (in Bond)," both of them of dry-era vintage, and this opening serves as a welcome novelty. Lino Ventura is a bootlegger-sailor operating under treacher-

Entertainment in New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 14 (IET).—This is how The New York Times critic rates the new movies: "Millhouse," Emile de Antonio's study of the political career of Richard Nixon, put together with newsreel footage, television kinescopes and take-outs from political spots that Nixon made as a presidential candidate, is a "Dos Passos-like collage of the American scene as represented by the man who, in De Antonio's portrait, seems always to win when he loses and lose when he wins," relates Vincent Canby, "whose speeches are as barren as the California desert, whose rhetoric consists mainly in answering questions no one has asked, and who can't even tell a funny story, or a reminiscence, without somehow sandbagging himself into exposing a lot more of his fantasy life than any man need decently do." De Antonio has "no special interest in balanced reportage, which is as antithetical to his concerns as it is to those of superior fiction," Canby says, "and 'Millhouse'... is superior fiction."

"Sacco and Vanzetti," directed by Giuliano Montaldo, screenplay (English and Italian, with English subtitles), by Fabrizio Onofri and Mr. Montaldo, got a mixed review from Vincent Canby. "If you believe, as I do, that Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent," says Canby, "then you will probably be moved—in spite of your better cinematic instincts—by 'Sacco and Vanzetti,' an Italian film that elects to play on our best prejudices rather than make a reasonable or eloquent plea for truth." The protagonists emerge in the film as "something like flesh and blood characters... the result of the screen presence of the two intelligent actors who play them"—Olga Maria Volonte, who played in "A Citizen Above Suspicion," as Vanzetti, and Riccardo Cucciolia, as Sacco.

"In the Family" is a program of six short subjects produced by members of four different families, showing at the Whitney Museum of American Art. The museum, "which favored such packages as 'Films by Women' in its first series, again is making a valid, collective point in its second season," writes A.H. Weller. "As might be surmised, the selections illustrate, if only obliquely, that blood and talent do mix occasionally with rarely boring effects." The films are: "Permutations," by John Whitney Sr.; "Terminal Self," by John Whitney Jr.; "I Shapira and Son," by Barry Shapira; "Conversations in Vermont," by Robert Frank; "Fragments," by Mike Kuchar, and "Portrait of Ramona," by George Kuchar.

her photographs and then, by chance, meets her when she is on a holiday in Havana. She teases him into a grandiose romance, and there is a strained attempt to cartoon the mad 1920s in the fashion of "The Boy Friend."

Erigite Bardot is the cinema queen, which provides her with the opportunity to mimic the mannerisms of the mute screen's heroines and to caricature the Charleston-possessed flapper of the spoken sequences. The buffoonery, alas, broadens beyond control and things become silly and tiresome, the farce seeming to have lost its rudder. A firmer directorial hand was required to impose a distinctive style. A fetching idea, and a promising start land joltingly on the rocks after the first hour. There are, however, some entertaining bits, including Joe Turner of the Calavados seen at the piano of a Kingston honky-tonk.

Charlie Brown of the comic strip has been engagingly animated in the cartoon film "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" (at the Morrie-Carlo in English). One follows him on his visit to New York to take part in a national spelling bee after he has to his own surprise won a match in his home town school. He fails to triumph in the greater contest, but he proves his mettle and courage, ridding himself of his inferiority complex. It makes a most agreeable hour and a half, an original movie, filled with pleasant humor.

Restoring Loveliest Ruin in Germany

By John M. Pearce

FRANKFURT (IET).—After a quarter century as "Germany's loveliest ruin" and almost a decade of political controversy, Frankfurt's bombed-out opera house will be restored. It will never again be used for opera, but the organization presiding over an aggressive fundraising campaign plans to turn it into a municipal concert and convention center, if it can overcome the city government's lukewarm attitude.

"Our aim is to open the house in 1975," Fritz Kroeger, manager of the Opera House Association, says. The Victorian building, architectural relative of the opera houses in Paris and Vienna, dominated Frankfurt for more than a half century until March 22, 1944, when the British dropped incendiary bombs on the city. While the fighters concentrated on residential and industrial areas, the opera house burned to a blackened stone shell.

The architectural legacy of Richard Lucae of Berlin was first believed damaged beyond repair. It was left to decay, and a new opera house was included in the rebuilt Municipal Theater complex near the River Main. However, in 1949 engineers found that the structure was still sound.

Efforts to rebuild the old opera have had to move on two fronts: raising funds and political maneuvering. Frankfurt's Social Democratic government, which owns the ruin, has contended all along it could not finance a rebuilding while other crucial areas—especially schools and hospitals—needed money. But it has given the association permission to make plans and do some exterior work on the building's facade.

However, discussion continues. A few weeks ago Fritz Dietz, the sugar baron who founded and heads the association, predicted that the major building would begin soon, and less than a week later two city officials publicly contradicted him. Examination of the ruin wasn't yet finished, they said.

In addition to the ownership problem, the city's help is essential because the association is depending on it to guarantee the substantial loans that will be needed to finish the reconstruction. Kroeger said the association has about 11 million marks in gifts or pledges so far, and estimates that another 10 million will come in when serious work begins. But he thinks the project will cost 40 to 45 million, and the balance will have to come from mortgage banks—which have promised low interest rates if the city guarantees that they will be repaid.

Money has already come from many sources including, Mr. Kroeger said, American and Israeli Jews who fled Frankfurt as refugees before World War II. Mr. Kroeger said that they have given several hundred thousand marks, with the understanding they will remain anonymous. The association has held subscription concerts and has just finished a month-long lottery on the busy Hauptweiche, transfer point for many of the city's tram lines. Prizes ranged from expensive cars to bars of soap.

Mr. Dietz's family has lived in Frankfurt for hundreds of years, and his contacts helped. "I have many friends here, and they gave big sums," he said. To meet the city's numerous conditions, the association plans to rebuild the old house as a concert and convention building. Its large hall will seat 3,000 concertgoers, and a smaller one could accommodate 800 people for meetings and 400 for

Events. Mr. Kroeger said experience with 270 seats which has 270 seats. Not even the project supporters have come to a meeting hall in Frankfurt to be self-supporting. "We know every bit will be a concert," he says. Mr. Kroeger said the project supporters have come to a meeting hall in Frankfurt to be self-supporting. "We know every bit will be a concert," he says. FASHION

Ready-to-Wear Season

By Hebe Donsey

PARIS, Oct. 14 (IET).—French ready-to-wear is attracting thousands of visitors (including 20,000 buyers), but so far it has no organization to cope with the press, which is coming in increasing numbers. The 22d Salon du Prêt-à-Porter (Oct. 23-29) is international and includes all sections of ready-to-wear: a run-of-the-mill, large-scale industry, boutiques and deluxe. It will spread over three floors and 55,000 square meters and include 800 exhibitors. Its main function is not to advertise clothes; it is to sell them. So, journalists trying to find their way around are often badly received, if at all.

By doing a lot of walking around, a fashion journalist may come out with a faint notion of what the general trends for next spring will be. But even that is doubtful because there is so much prating in those salons that a great many houses now hold back half (and the better part) of their production in their warehouses—which they open only to serious, hard-cash customers.

Outside the Salon A great number of trend-setting ready-to-wear firms hold shows outside the salon. But they are scattered all over town, sometimes in remote locales, and the shows stretch over two to three weeks. So any foreign journalist who tries to cover the Paris ready-to-wear showings in a few days is in for a hard time.

What is needed is a thorough editing job on the part of the houses and a compact, coherent schedule of the kind which is already routine in New York and Florence. In Florence, for instance, capsule showings parade at a fast tempo in one place (Palazzo Pitti) and the whole thing is over in three days. Anybody interested in getting a second look can always go to Palazzo Strozzi, the equivalent of the Porte de Versailles.

French couture, with its Chambre Syndicale, has had a strong backbone. Right now, French fashion is at an in-between stage which could be quite dangerous. If the press is discouraged from coming to the ready-to-wear salons (because of lack of coordination) and also quits coming to the couture collections (because of the thinning out of top names) it may fall into the habit of bypassing Paris altogether.

The ready-to-wear season opens in Florence next Monday. The French take over on Oct. 23. As for Spain, spokesman Countess of Quintanilla has announced that couture collections will be done away with altogether, and the Spanish will concentrate on ready-to-wear with showings in Barcelona and Madrid.

Coin Collectors The German-American coin club in Wiesbaden, Germany, will sponsor a coin show on Oct. 17 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Rocker NCO Club, Lindsey Air Station. Admission is free.

EEC Warns Europe Faces Slump

By Hobart Rowen WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (WP)—EEC officials have warned U.S. officials in the past few days that the European economic situation is deteriorating...

They cite, especially, the 10 percent surtax as one of the new U.S. "protectionist measures" that are certain to be used as a pretext for escalating retaliatory measures...

At the same time, these officials offer as a "personal opinion" that the United States is "entering a period of second thoughts" about the international phases of the NEP.

"The American government is well informed about the resolution of opinion in the other countries," one EEC official said. He mentioned particularly that the West German government was disillusioned because it had "not been rewarded for friendlier behavior." The higher deutsche mark rate, combined with the surcharge and the disadvantages of new tax proposals and the "Buy American" investment credit, creates a strong disinclination of the competitiveness of German industry...

"The U.S. authorities," he asserted, "are looking for a settlement as quickly as possible." The European officials hinted that the United States will eventually raise the price of gold modestly as its contribution to a general realignment of exchange rates...

Oil Producers Set Demands

VIENNA, Oct. 14 (UPI)—The nations that own most of the world's oil exports finished work today on a multimillion-dollar bill to be presented to Western oil companies to offset the decline in the dollar's value.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) said central bankers from OPEC's 11 member states ended a three-day meeting here by drawing up recommendations to guide members in talks with oil firms expected to begin soon.

The exact amount recommended was not announced, but oil sources and reports abroad indicated the OPEC nations will demand an increase of 5 to 7.5 percent in the "posted price" — an arbitrary figure used to compute the taxes which the oil companies pay to the oil-producing nations in talks with oil firms expected to begin soon.

Dow Off 10.44 As Investors Await Phase 2

Lack of Policy Details A Worry, Analysts Say

By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW YORK, Oct. 14 (NYT)—A jittery stock market took a severe pasting today as prices fell to their lowest level since the Friday before the famous "Nixon rally" on Aug. 16.

The Dow Jones industrial average tumbled 10.44 to finish at 878.36, with selling by chartists and traders late in the session accentuating the decline.

In the final half hour, the Dow cracked below 880 on the charts, which was considered to form an important support level.

Reasons for the setback—more than 1,000 issues dropped on the New York Stock Exchange—included confusion over Phase 2 of the economic stabilization program, as well as some worry over a possible deterioration of profit margins.

Investors are wary of Phase 2, analysts said, because details have not been forthcoming on how it will work and what its effects will be.

Leading blue chips and famous-name glamour bore the brunt of today's selling, along with such groups as automobiles, golds, tobaccos, soft drinks and airlines.

General Motors, the nation's biggest manufacturer, led the active list on a turnover of 409,700 shares as it fell 1 5/8 to 81 5/8 in the face of surging new-car sales.

Indicative of institutional selling pressure was a single block of 349,200 shares of GM at a price of $2.

Chrysler, No. 3 on the active roster, tumbled 1 7/8 to 30. American Telephone, the most widely owned stock in the country, dropped 1 to 43 7/8 in heavy trading.

Underlining the market's bleak performance, not a single issue among the 30 Dow Jones industrials posted a gain. The leading point loser was Woolworth, down 2 1/8 to 50.

Priorities were also hard hit on the American Stock Exchange. Deltona fell 2 5/8 to 34 1/2. A company spokesman could not explain the decline and said the firm expects higher third-quarter net.

You probably have money in some kind of a savings account in the bank right now. And you'd probably do better if you had that account at our bank instead of your bank.

The reasons are simple. You earn 7.18%. Or more. We pay 7.18%, compounded quarterly, on demand deposits. And your funds are available for immediate withdrawal.

We pay even higher rates on fixed term deposits. Your money is very, very safe. We currently service over $200,000,000 worth of deposits from over 115 different countries.

We're fully insured by Lloyd's of London against disappearance, destruction and dishonesty.

What's more, we're chartered and licensed under the Bahamas Government. A politically stable place to live. And an economically stable place to do business.

Your transactions are completely confidential. The British American Bank conforms to the 1965 Bahamas Banking Act. It gives you absolute privacy as a depositor.

We are required to make no reports of accounts to the Government of the Bahamas. Or to any private agency. With us, if you want it that way, you're just a number.

Your earnings are tax-free. The Bahamas impose no income taxes, capital gains taxes, personal property taxes, probate or death duties.

This means you receive every single penny of your interest. Intact. Whether your account is $100 or $1,000,000.

You can get things going before you turn this page. Banking by mail with us is fast and secure from anywhere in the world.

And you can open a demand deposit savings account right now. Just fill out the coupon, enclose your initial deposit, and send it in.

We'll open your account, and send your deposit receipt and your bank book by return mail. If you're not ready to open an account at this point, you can still get more information on the British American Bank. Just check the appropriate box and send in the coupon.

But don't put it off. Chances are you're losing money every day you wait.

BRIDGE By Alan Truscott

South on the diagrammed deal chose to open one no-trump, a precision bid showing 13 to 15 points, instead of an orthodox one heart. North followed Stayman with two no-trump, a game invitation that South accepted.

East won the opening diamond lead with the ace, and shifted to a low club. This was ducked to the king, and West continued in clubs. After winning the ace, South led a heart to dummy's queen.

The revelation of the bad heart distribution was a blow to the declarer. East won with the king and returned a club, removing dummy's queen, and apparently leaving South with no way to make a ninth trick. After South cashed the ace-queen of spades this position was reached:

NORTH	WEST	EAST	SOUTH (D)
♠K9	♠J872	♠1064	♠AQ
♥A4	♥	♥K10973	♥AQ4
♦85	♦Q10983	♦A	♦852
	♦KJ82	♦10953
WEST	EAST
♠J8	♠10
♥	♥Q10973
♦Q109	♦9
SOUTH
♥KJ

Both sides were vulnerable. The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1N.T. Pass	2♣ Pass	2N.T. Pass	3N.T. Pass

South had a good clue to the distribution. West had begun with a heart void and apparently five diamonds and four clubs. That left room for exactly four spades, so West was headed for trouble. The heart jack was cashed and West was able to part with a diamond.

But when a heart was led to the ace in dummy West had to abandon his last club. This was a preliminary squeeze to set up an endplay. The declarer followed the spade king by the spade nine. West won with the jack, and had to lead from the diamond queen at the finish.

CRUISING SPEED
By William F. Buckley Jr. G. P. Putnam's Sons, 257 p.
Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

IT seems to me that, in listening to or reading William Buckley, many people—I'm tempted to say "most"—judge the truth or value of what he says not in its own terms, but according to their personal estimates of his "sincerity." Even when they concede that he is correct in a particular instance, some dismiss his position as a "put on"—for them, facts are disquieted in coming from his mouth. Truth is seen as necessarily homely, simple, sentimental, violent, ugly, born in the bowels rather than the brain. Buckley's appearance, accent and idiosyncrasies all militate (I use the word advisedly) against him. He does not frown, sweat or unduly agonize in giving birth to his ideas; he is rarely moved by that "passion" that seeing the light is supposed to inspire. In fact, he appears to be something of a cold fish, and the inevitable assumption is made that he is toying with his audience and his guests on "Firing Line"...

But when a heart was led to the ace in dummy West had to abandon his last club. This was a preliminary squeeze to set up an endplay. The declarer followed the spade king by the spade nine. West won with the jack, and had to lead from the diamond queen at the finish.

Perhaps this is why he has written "Cruising Speed." Here, look at my life, he seems to be saying—do I sound sinister, as I go about my daily rounds? Do I seem to be conspiring against justice and decency? Do I strike you as a man who doesn't care? His opening page, however, almost undermines his purpose: it is about his dog. One thinks of a younger Nixon on television with his dog... of Arthur Godfrey playing with his dog for 20 minutes on his national book-up... and feels measurably that the poor dog has become the trademark of sincerity, as if it would bark or bite its master otherwise. (In this context, Lyndon Johnson's celebrated hoisting of his dog by the ears should be re-examined for all its conceivable nuances.)

Fortunately, the dogs are soon disposed of—unwisely in a limousine—and by page two we are deep in the texture of Buckley's quotidian frenzy as a charismatic figure, hero of a controversial political position, editor of a magazine, syndicated television personality and so on. He is showing us why he does what he does, and it sounds convincing.

Buckley disarms me, not by his famous chat too serious, too prickly, agonized in his mind to be easy—but by his naturalness one feels I do not know how to feel. He is not so much a mock as simply fastidiously and traitor high places.

We see Buckley acting over the decision or not to write a review in the Village Voice and... against it not because paper's politics, but style. He admits that lessons in his defense cannot get more serious. We meet the author's enemies and find out occupy these positions, back at some of his I listed encounters and takes them as far as allows. He muses on takes and admits that they are beyond the his constitution to do.

When John Kenneth advises him to "give" the whole thing, Nation journalism, television, turning... and come to deny and write books. It is only books that Buckley answers that have already been written the most part, and than he could write. Perhaps, he says, it in life to try to know. He can only t by "a sense of social t. That's why he does th manding—and often things he describes "diary."

I'm inclined to be living through these with him, one would almost paranoid to a anything but what he

Great-Grandfather of Modern Linguistics

By Israel Shenker

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (NTT)—Monday was Prof. Roman Jakobson's 75th birthday, but those who wanted to do him honor couldn't because he went into hiding. Prof. Jakobson, the grand old man of linguistics, was afraid that admirers would embarrass him with their praise—too effusive, not balanced enough, not as precise as reflection warrants and language allows.

Prof. Roman Jakobson ... went into hiding.

When a visitor once spoke of 42-year-old Noam Chomsky as the father of modern linguistics, Prof. Jakobson jokingly said: "No, not the father, the grandfather. He has parents and his parents have parents." But Prof. Jakobson, the 75-year-old great-grandfather of modern linguistics, taught Dr. Chomsky and about 100 other professors of linguistics in this country alone.

These are the discrete entities that enable us to distinguish one word from another. Prof. Jakobson said in an interview here: "When we have such words as 'hill' and 'hill', the finite element is the relation between 'B' and 'P' between the voiced and voiceless. Or 'hill' in relation to 'mill', the lack of nasality and nasality. These are the finite relations which have no meaning but are necessary to permit us to construct the language on all its levels."
